

2.16. Information "field" of a planet inhabited by intelligent life.

The brain only perceives information which a Person is ready for or believes in...

Information...

Information space...

Information field...

All these concepts for the vast majority of the inhabitants of the planet are very conditional and approximate. Almost no one thinks about what these words mean, and when asked: "What do YOU mean by the word ИНФОРМАЦИЯ/INFORMATION?", an inarticulate mumbling or links to Wikipedia are heard in response.

Currently, information is a scientific concept that means the exchange of informative data not only between people, but also between a person and an automaton, an automaton and an automaton, as well as the exchange of signals in the animal and plant world, the transmission of signs from cell to cell, from organism to organism. Even the simplest unicellular organisms receive information about the state of the external environment and use it when choosing the most favorable conditions. Such an idea of information allows us to conclude that this is an inherent property of matter, and all material bodies can exchange information. But is this enough to understand what the INFORMATION is? Does this interpretation give rise to various absurd fabrications and arguments that lead away from the true understanding of the nature of living and inanimate matter?

I will allow myself to fantasize a little and convey my understanding of these terms, which denote an as yet unconscious reality, both for many philosophical schools and for scientific and religious representation. I hope that this information, as a "framed" result of my reflections, will be transmitted in the form of information to a potential "receiver" and accepted without distortion - so that a certain fragment of the reality I see is reflected in the perceiving subject, and the result of this reflection would be recorded in material form, that is, "framed" as this is what the etymology of the Latin basis of the term requires.

If we resort to deciphering the meaning of the word by its constituent roots, then in the word INFORMATION there is a coded answer: the YIN FORM OF QI. Energy (QI, CHI, KI, SI - according to the designation of different philosophical schools of the East and West), enclosed in a certain form, and held there. Considering that energy is a property of matter during its transformation, it is quite logical to conclude that information is a completely material substance having a certain form-a matrix that can carry a strictly individual content (PROGRAM), distinguished quantitatively and qualitatively from many other forms of matter and spatial structures that do not interact with it. This form is supported by the necessary frequency range within the specified octaves (dimensionality). Let me remind you that DIMENSIONALITY is a set of qualitative characteristics of space.

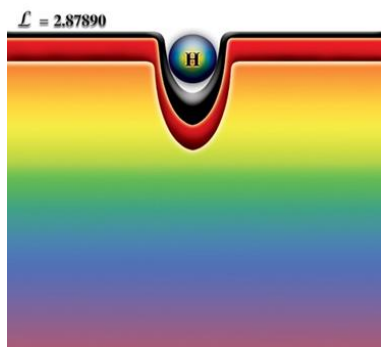

Accordingly, the phrases Information Space and Information Field already acquire a more definite meaning and image. Suppose that space or a field is like a receptacle for many forms of matter that differ in qualitative and quantitative characteristics, as, for example, water in a vaporous state differs from water in a solid state. This is a rather distant comparison, but it is quite accessible for understanding some of the differences between the space-matter, which we habitually call the environment. However, modern science, having studied the nature of matter to the extent of dividing matter into elementary particles and waves, does not bother to explain how waves arise, where, according to the ideas of scientific authorities, there is no environment. As, for example, in the atom. The distance from the nucleus to the electron, which is in an unstable state in the deformation zone, in the so-called orbit, exceeds the size of these particles by orders of magnitude. More precisely, not particles, but clumps of formed matter. That is, the atom is 99.9% empty. This void is commonly called the interaction field. Or a gravitational field. What can a "field" be?

Not so long ago, astrophysicists discovered "dark matter" and "dark energy" in the space of the Universe, which no devices invented by mankind, based on ideas about nature, can register DIRECTLY. Only indirectly!

Only "dark matter" was indirectly detected, and "dark energy" was obtained by calculation. Without this substance, manifested in the form of energy, the substance given to us "in sensations" through the senses, including devices built of Physically Dense Matter (FDM), simply could not have such complete forms and trajectories of movement. "Dark matter" is a denser formation through which light passes, changing its direction. Let's denote "dark matter" - a hybrid form of matter (HFM) of a more "subtle" manifestation, in contrast to baryonic matter. "Dark energy" is a substance not in a bound, free form - primary matter (PM) that make up the fabric of space with constantly changing properties and qualities. Together, all the listed structures of the presented forms of existence of matter represent the heterogeneous space of our universe, in which the forms of matter are distributed in accordance with the dimensionality of space, forming an INFORMATION FIELD - a set of stacked spaces, the interaction of their harmonies and development programs.

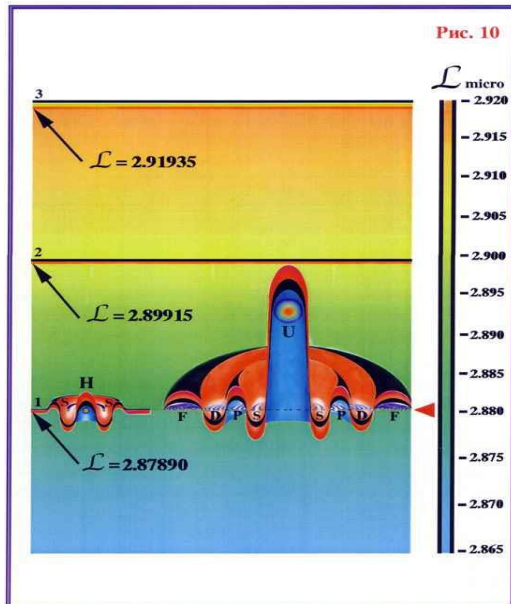

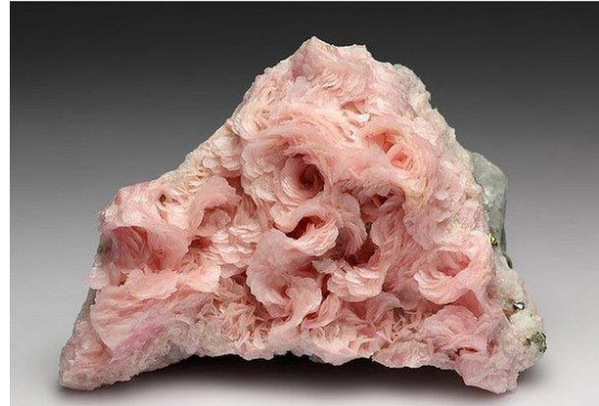

Our planet Earth is formed by several types of spatial structures, which represent 6 spheres nested one into another. These spheres differ in their qualitative and quantitative parameters, since they are heterogeneous in the structure of space, or crystal structures of different levels of dimensionality. Each of these spaces consists of a different set of forms of primary matter. Thus, the densest sphere of Midgard-Earth is formed by hybrid matter from seven forms of primary matter. More details about the formation of the planet from the primary forms of matter can be read in the fundamental work of N.V. Levashov "Heterogeneous Universe".

According to scientific ideas, both the planet itself and life are created by dust, which has stuck together in a certain order, creating a whole variety of not only inorganic substances, but also living beings. To the question: "What is this order and its cause?" orthodox scientists report that God only knows. With grief, they learned to determine the structure of a substance by spectral analysis, having conducted a huge number of comparative samples and ordering what they already had. So, they came to some idea about the structure of atoms and molecules, but they did not understand how these atoms themselves arose. They just took it for granted. And what is living matter, why the ability to self-reproduce both molecular structures and the living organism itself, has remained beyond the boundaries of ideas. What is consciousness? Where did the first thought come from? Is it also made of dust, even if it's stellar dust?!

How was the BRAIN formed, this most complicated complex that cannot be created from dust? The Brain is the result of a multimillion-year period of time (in astronomical terms of time) of the formation of a bio-structure, which led to a simultaneous state of connected spaces in at least three states (spaces), namely neutrino (higher), antineutron and proton, or ion (terminology of A.M. Khatybov). If we move on to more familiar terminology, then in addition to the dense state, the Brain also has the so-called etheric, astral and mental spaces, although not in all living individuals. Levashov introduced another name for these spaces: MATERIAL LEVELS.

So, we have decided on the terms, so that in the future we will call the information fields simply - the information material level. These levels have certain qualities that are formed by those forms of matter that correspond to the dimensionality of these spaces. And if we take into account the meaning of the expression like attracts like, then this will now become the key to understanding how people can accumulate, transmit and receive information.

So, let's start from the very beginning of Brain formation, with the atom.

The atom, like any other FM substance, was formed by the fusion of 7 PM (microspaces) into a HFM - physically dense.

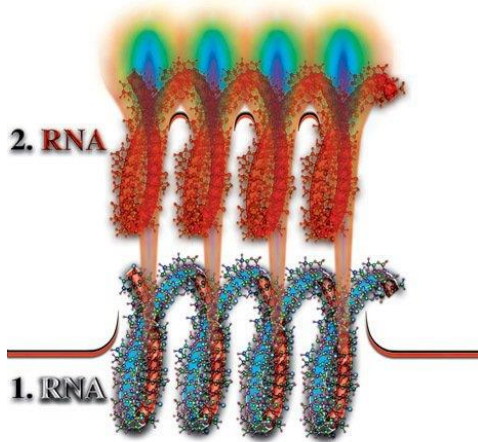

Under the influence of gravity-electromagnetic formation, the atom retains its integrity as long as it is in the information zone of the passing streams, that is, in the range of the supporting octave frequencies. Or in the range of the dimensional difference in which this substance is not destroyed. There is also information in the crystal structures of the natural formation that allows even after extraction of these substances in the form of minerals, to restore new FM crystals in the niche of their formation by synthesis. There are cases of recovery of oil and minerals in abandoned wells and mines. An interesting phenomenon is the growth of minerals, the so-called "living crystals", which indicates the presence of information support for this particular crystal formation. Failure of the program, that is, the absence of any parameter of the frequency of this accompaniment, leads to destruction. The once integral structure turns into sand.

There are two types of molecules that form the basis of living and inanimate matter - organic and inorganic molecules. But this does not mean that inanimate matter has no information support. There is, and it is this information that builds them into cubic structures. The spatial arrangement of living crystals, such as an RNA or DNA molecule, has a more complex information support, which allows maintaining integrity even when moving to another "niche" that is not native to the formation of these structures. For example, the virus enters the stage of "inanimate" matter, losing water. But its copy (matrix) is saved. Once again getting into the water or the appropriate environment, the virus reproduces itself, "reading" the drawing of its structure from the information matrix.

Let's look at the example of cell division, the process of transferring information to a Physically dense plan for assembling the necessary parts:

The first and second illustrations show how the PM stream flows from the separated nuclei of the cell to the second material level. But where does another copy of the cell come from? One copy of the cell completely repeats the structure and shape of the dividing cell, and the other copy is reproduced according to the principle of resonance of the main PM flow and the information transmitted from the duplicate cell to the corresponding information flow. An additional deformation (curvature) of the space is created, which begins to be projected onto the material plane, creating a new cell next to the updated cell. Two new identical cells were obtained by synthesis. Isn't that the secret of eternal life? INFORMATION flow plus spatial message (form). And if you also introduce a development program, that is, strengthen the flow!!! After all, the aging of the cells of the human body occurs due to the weakening of the PM flow going through the channel from the FM cell, so the "new" cells already repeat all the pathology of the old cell, all the damage, inclusions, losses in the chromosome set...

The organism, as a multicellular and multilevel system, functions under the control of the Brain (Essence) with the support of energy-informational support. The old CS no longer controls people's Brains, there is a transition to higher octaves of the management of life support of certain territories. Without such support, the information of the native CS, the Brain of people will not be accepted either for their own life support or for reasonableness in actions, since structurally their Brain does not correspond to those qualities of the state of the lattice of the atmosphere that replaced the Ebrov system.

Let's return to the information space of the planet.

It is largely disrupted by the interventional system, the information is fragmented and selectively fed to certain "advanced" Brain genotypes in order to completely capture the genetic foundation of people who could read information from the blocked levels of the planet. This is due to the loss of frequencies and a decrease in the Brain octaves in humans after capture. The interventional CS forced all the "hatched" to work for themselves, controlling the information they provided and distorting it.

From the works of A.M. Khatybov, you can learn more about how the dispersion of high octaves took place, and why so much sand was formed on our Planet, as well as about WHAT is the CS, the Interventional system, the Ebrov system, the Human Brain and much more.

The change in the atmospheric lattice led to a distortion of the information of the true Control System, which could not but affect the formation of the Human body. New Programs for the biogenesis of the flesh were imputed, and through these programs the control and selection of the necessary biomaterial was carried out. Now we have to rebuild all this on the native System of life support and management. By condition. Restore BRAIN Physics, CELL Physics and ENERGY Physics. This is a rather painful process. Many already feel it. It is necessary for the opportunity to live and be in harmony with the natural nature of the planet. And so far, we are really "aliens"...

Needless to say, everything created by people is short-lived, as it lacks information support. The same structures could be created for centuries and delight the Human eye with their beauty, grandeur and harmony of proportions of the Golden Section. We still admire the architecture of St. Petersburg, admiring its beautiful columns, palaces and sculptures, not understanding how it was possible to create such grandiose structures!

And they were not made by sawing out monoliths and dragging them on horses, but were cast from geopolymer concrete, which was based on natural materials and technologies for their information support.

In this regard, it is worth recalling the iron pillar in India, which for many centuries has not been subject to corrosion and does not even bear traces of rust...

And finally: Many times, there were questions about the logo from the website of Nikolai Viktorovich LEVASHOV, but the explanation given by him did not lead everyone to understand this image. Now the meaning of the name "Seeds of Mind/Reason" emerges more clearly, showing us that this is the Earth's Control System. INFORMATION SPACE, from where you can get KNOWLEDGE about the structure of this space, but not just by "plugging" into it, as in an outlet, but by your own efforts to develop individual consciousness, by COGNIZING and synthesizing this information, by gradually improving and combining the structures of the Essence of each individual with the Brain of the CS.

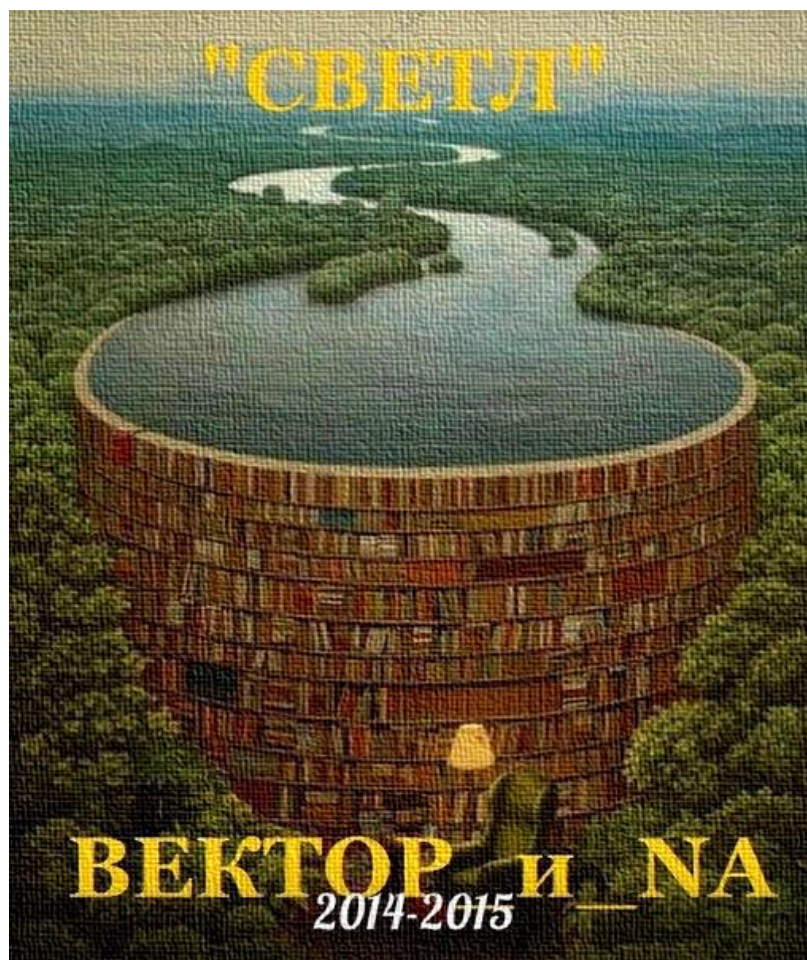

The picture "SEEDS OF REASON" - KNOWLEDGE coming through all layers of the atmosphere about its true structure, cause-and-effect relationships, past, present, and future - to HUMANITY through each individual ("shirts" is the term of A. Khatybov) according to the of its relationship with the Brain of the planet (the information space of the Earth).

Afterword.

In conclusion, it is necessary to focus on water.

What is WATER for the Planet and for people today? It is both LIFE and INFORMATION!!! The spatial lattices it passes through, this is the information we get. Everything that is done with water affects our health and thinking. This affects the inability to correctly and fully analyze (assimilate) information, including those recorded in water. Now information can only be obtained by comprehending an array of disparate information in the form of books, so an illustration for reflection and creation of an IMAGE (form) has recently been proposed, which will help to see much of what passes by our attention.

Here is this illustration:

The answer to the question that was asked in the Mini-Vectoring https://vk.com/topic-75441105_30639065, "generated" different images for different participants and led to different conclusions. However, something in common can be traced in all the answers: WATER-INFORMATION-KNOWLEDGE...

I am very grateful to all the participants of the Mini-Quiz for YOUR excellent responses. Therefore, I give one general answer. The answer, in my opinion, which will prompt further reflection and further search, because KNOWLEDGE has no boundaries!

As a river, gathering from small streams, turns into a full-flowing river, so fragmentary information flows turn into information as a result of observations and reflections, gathering in the form of decorated phrases, texts, and pouring out into books. Unfortunately, in the parasitic system, water is subject to severe deformation distortion, launched in the form of RIVERS, AS WELL, therefore knowledge is fragmentary and in order to collect a complete and consistent picture of reality, you need to study this dam of books standing in the way of the pure Source of Life - the TRUTH about the CREATED WORLD.

The water in the illustration flows in and out. It follows, forming a collection of information - a PISHURA, and it follows, as already reinterpreted information that has become Awareness, Cognition or Knowledge. This is the "sleeping memory" of many generations of people, and the memory of the Earth itself. If you think carefully, you can understand that the formation of atoms occurs at all levels of the Planet, and each embodied atom is information that we perceive at the level of the senses, coming into contact with it. But after all, the main program memory lies on other levels. Just like the Human Brain, it is not only a physical carrier placed in the cranial "box", but something that cannot be captured by devices created on the basis of limited ideas about Matter. However, there are some differences between the atom and the Brain. The essence is inanimate and living Matter.

The first brick of everything in our universe is a hydrogen atom, so the synthesis of matter begins in the upper layers of the Planet's atmosphere. Getting into different zones of space with different dimensions, the substance of the hybrid form accumulates or loses mass. Passing through various lattices of the atmosphere, during its formation, water absorbs information that contains the basis for the origin of everything on the planet: from light atoms to heavier elements, from inorganic and organic molecules to a living cell, from the simplest unicellular organism to a complex "multicellular". In his books, N.V. Levashov perfectly described the role of water in the formation of organic molecules, but, IN MY OPINION, he did not "touch" on the very process of the emergence of these atoms and molecules in the water of the primary ocean. And here is a great mystery hidden, which is not easy to comprehend. But it is easy to destroy this sacrament by dividing, moving and poisoning the water and the information it carries. The same purpose of division and distortion was served by a lot of books with disparate, externally introduced, distorted interpretations, books broken by translation from a foreign language into a modified Russian language and simply with a "confused" course of events. This software provider of limited and chaotic information becomes a dam in the path of a Human who seeks to learn by virtue of his NATURE. But it is still impossible without this dam. The direct connection from Na_Chala is lost. The information flow that passed through the evolutionary jungle must be comprehended carefully, "brick by brick", removing the top (highest quality) layer, selecting the grains of truth from the husk of distorted and dead impurities. To distinguish the truth from falsehood occurs through KNOWLEDGE - passed through itself, and conscious information that gives a solid foundation - the basis of where and what piece of the mosaic should be put. Here it is appropriate to "REMEMBER" about the "SvetL" Technology, created FOR ALL OF US by the GENIUS of N. LEVASHOV, WHICH in the form of a "table top" helps to illuminate and find true information faster. You just need to "READ", THINK, ASK A QUESTION and find a relationship with what has ALREADY been comprehended. And the more learned, the faster the thinking. This will lead to the fact that the dam will be overcome by the POWER of THOUGHT to obtain a pure flow of information directly through the Human Brain - a Brain that is qualitatively compatible with the Memory of the Earth and Water.

And then the secrets of the universe will surrender to the mercy of the triumphant MIND.

I wish everyone who participates in our PROJECT on the "disclosure" of the Brain in what I believe is NOT a STANDARD WAY, like "SvetL"-Vector and Na, to overcome the qualitative barrier set before us by those who do not have the opportunity, due to their inconsistency, due to their alien nature, to penetrate the Secrets of the Universe created for HUMANITY!
