

Salvation of the Saviors (series 50-369) Heart and Mind...

The power of the mind is not in the ability to smash through walls with your head, but in finding doors.

Planes are falling... people are dying... All platforms trumpet about odiousness and heroism in various conjectures and interpretations. The "powerful of this world" speak out, adding to the confusion in understanding what is happening with their explanations, but for some reason no one asks the question - why is this happening? What is the basis of all this? Why do people behave the way they do and not otherwise and do not think about it? Many people have VERY CONTRADICTIONARY feelings, most often critical, and they have more than enough reasons, but NO EXPLANATION as to why it is the way it is and not the other way around. Explanations are not superficial, these are explanations based on one's own knowledge, which are impossible without true information.

All the concepts of honor, duty, conscience, obligations are NOTHING MORE than the attitudes that the state today writes by all means to the subconscious of its subjects. We read books where book heroes teach us how to behave. We watch movies where movie characters set standards of behavior. As a result, we find ourselves hung with a bunch of prescriptions, norms and taboos, none of which are able to explain. But this DOES NOT PREVENT us from sacredly following them all our lives, checking and evaluating our actions according to patterns. For example – Death – for the Motherland. And maybe still – Life– for the Motherland? We proceed in the questions of what is possible and what is not, not from common sense and efficiency, but from the program.

Count Alexei Tolstoy DID NOT LIKE the Soviet government and the proletariat. He owns the fantasy novel "Aelita". The novel was well written, and the Soviet people liked it. They started calling their children this. But they DID NOT KNOW that the PREFIX "A" means negation –a-thom (indivisible); a-theism (there is no God). Aelita literally means "not elite".

The greatness of writers, directors and other creative artists who are called great is in the art of manipulation. Their works have encouraged people to lay their lives and goodness on the altar of what is programmed in the words honor and duty. How many men have been killed and women made "blue stockings" by these great manipulators....

The transition from the old to the new is like the transition from tropical to glacial climates. To visualize it, let's go back to the pre-glacial period, to the world of reptiles. They were a perfect system, went without food for a long time, powered by the sun (bask and get energy). Plus size. A dinosaur could only stand up to a dinosaur, like a knight could only stand up to a knight. Shaggy and warm-blooded mammals looked like food in comparison. The dinosaurs ate them WITHOUT THINKING of justice. How a pike ate a crucian, who began to tell it about universal love and equality, and also about the fact that you can't eat a crucian. The pike "opened its mouth in surprise. She mechanically took a sip of water and, not at all wanting to swallow the crucian carp<sup>1</sup>, swallowed it.. But the climate changed - it got colder. Fat pluses became fat minuses. Huge and cold-bloodedness killed yesterday's elite - dinosaurs froze. If small individuals could hide in crevices from the cold (lizards, for example), where they survived until the next sun, the large ones had nowhere to hide. Fat minuses for past conditions became fat pluses in the new situation. Warm-bloodedness and shagginess became competitive advantages. Yesterday's elite became the nourishment of yesterday's outcasts. Yesterday's elite has become the food of yesterday's outcasts. The most insignificant rodent in the new conditions turned out to be cooler than the most gigantic dinosaur, so much that he looked from his burrow at the freezing giant, no longer as though he was a king, whom yesterday it was scary to approach, but as a FOOD that would freeze a little more, then you can start eating.

And the freezing giant, realizing the intention of the licking shaggy "nonentity" looking at him, thought with horror that the world had turned upside down. Neither the mind NOR the heart of the reptiles COULD accept the new.

Traditional states today are dinosaurs on the transition from a tropical climate to an Arctic one. As long as the conditions are stable, they are the strongest, and their status is unshakable. But since life DOES NOT STAND still, the civilizational climate is changing. Then the political flora and fauna change. What does not transform under the new climate, then dies. The world is a continuous pressure of new forms on old ones. If the old DOES NOT WITHSTAND the pressure, it collapses, and a new one takes its place. After a while, the new ceases to be new and becomes traditional — the nature of the current moment. During this period, the next new thing is born, beginning to push on yesterday's new. It is impossible to stop this process, because the world is always in motion. Movement generates change. The accumulation of a critical amount of novelty INITIATES the TRANSITION of quantity into quality. The situation-the climate is beginning to change at a fundamental level. There are always forces in the world interested in crushing the old and establishing the new. And there are forces interested in the opposite — in preserving the old and preventing the new. As long as the design corresponds, firstly, to the ideological climate, and secondly, to the political and economic, it CANNOT be BROKEN. When it ceases to correspond to the situation and the spirit of the times, it CANNOT BE PRESERVED. Whoever sits at the key nodes of the existing system always protects it in the fiercest way. No arguments of reason have any effect on them, because their way of life depends on the system. The destruction of the system will lead to the destruction of their lives.

Sitting by the fireplace and over a glass of wine, the nobles loved to talk about the liberation of serfs. But it's one thing to talk, and quite another to release — to lose a source of income. If the serfs rebelled, trying to free themselves, the nobles suppressed the rebellion and again sat down by the fireplace to talk about the barbarity of feudal orders. Active people WHO are NOT EMBEDDED in the system are always most fiercely striving to destroy the old. If the attacking party presents an idea whose time has come, the persecution has the opposite effect. Sacred sacrifices and martyrs for the idea appear, playing the role of a banner around which, even more people gather. If the time of the idea has NOT COME, the victims still do not go to waste. When the time comes, they will make a banner out of them, as, for example, Giordano Bruno was made a martyr of science, although there was never ANYTHING SCIENTIFIC in his activities. He was burned because he openly preached a non-Christian religion - hermeticism. He argued that the universe is a deity, has no beginning, consists of many worlds in which God is dissolved. This fundamentally contradicted the Christian understanding of God. Bruno was persuaded for eight years and at the very end was forced by torture to renounce his views and refuse to preach them. But Bruno was very stubborn. He called his teaching "the philosophy of dawn" and was ready to die for it. What science has to do with it is unclear. One thing is clear: when the new struggles with the old, all means are good. Myth-making is one of the percussion instruments. It allows you to dress up real motives in exculpatory ones, thereby strengthening your position. To see the depth of the conflict between the old and the new, imagine two forms of life. One form can live at temperatures below zero. At zero, it dies.

Another form can live at temperatures above zero. At zero, it also dies. And these two lives are in one closed room, where you can set minus and plus temperatures. There is no room for compromise in this situation. A compromise in the form of 00 for both means death. A deadly collision of these two life forms is inevitable. Either one or none will remain alive. Under such conditions, there is no place for an option where BOTH LIVES will be preserved. The new always represents a nightmarish horror for the old, because it goes with one goal — to kill the old. The old always feels it with every fiber of his soul and therefore resists with all his strength, until his last breath. He has nothing to lose...

When Christians came into the pagan world, making a place for themselves under the sun, they DID NOT JUST deny the pagan gods, but desecrated them as best they could. Priests and believers who stood up in defense of their faith were killed. They destroyed temples, denied the system of values, mocked old traditions, flaunting all pagan norms. By the standards of the pre-Christian world, Christians were moral freaks and the deadly horror of hell. When the humanists came to the Christian world, they began to do exactly the same thing that the Christians had done to the pagans. They destroyed churches, mocked, humiliated and desecrated Christian norms, and made a mockery of them. Naked wenches danced on altars and defecated in the holy of holies. They would come to the service, and when communion began, they would shout that Christians were eating their God alive. Voltaire<sup>2</sup> PUTS FORWARD THE SLOGAN "crush the reptile!", pointing to the Church. Priests and parishioners who defended the faith were killed. By Christian standards, humanists were the FIEND of HELL and moral freaks. Today, something new is knocking on the doors of humanists. The new force will sweep them away just as they once swept away Christian civilization. The humanistic civilization, which now calls itself traditional (as every civilization calls itself), has no illusions about the intentions of the new, just as Christianity HAD NO illusions about the intentions of humanism. Therefore, she evaluates the new with horror, flying on the wings of the night. If at the time of the conquistadors, the South American civilization was at the same level of development as the European one, there would have been an IRRECONCILABLE CONFLICT between them when Europeans would have seen that the Indians were sacrificing children to their deities. For them, there would be no doubt that the Indians serve Satan and make terrible sacrifices to him. Faith would oblige Christians to go on a crusade against Satanists. The Indians would have been horrified by the Europeans' intention to prevent children from finding eternal bliss, and deities from gaining strength to protect the world from dark forces. (According to the Indians, the deities drew new strength from human sacrifices). They would also have no doubt that the Europeans are Satan's servants who have come to destroy the world. And their faith would similarly oblige them to go to war against the servants of Satan.

<sup>2</sup> Voltaire (21 November, 1694 – 30 May, 1778) was the birth name of Francois-Marie Arouet. French philosopher – educator of the XVIII century, poet, novelist, tragedian, historian and publicist. —

If the parties have different worldviews, different points of reference, each side is confident in its rightness, in such a situation there is no place for any negotiations. Compromise is possible if the parties are represented by normal people who have normal views on the world, normal goals and values. But since the concept of norm 100% determines the VIEW OF THE WORLD, and the conflicting parties have different views, they will have a DIFFERENT CONCEPT of norm. The difference in views at a fundamental level turns opponents, in the eyes of each other, not just into abnormal people, but into the fiend of hell and absolute evil, who cannot even be called people. People have normal views. For those who are abnormal, there are special negative epithets with a strong emotional component. An old civilization in a new situation ALWAYS BEGINS to collapse from two sides. On the one hand, it is under pressure from its own growing mass. On the other hand, a new one is pressing on her, the pressure of which is also growing. This process is commonly called evolution. Many have no doubt that the old world WILL INEVITABLY COLLAPSE. This is not a matter of principle, but of time. But the sooner it collapses, the faster the platform for creating a new model will be freed up. The faster we build it, the faster the resources dispersed today in the confrontation of states (read resources for creating death in all its aspects) will concentrate on solving the MAIN TASK – overcoming death. Everything that has been done in the world up to the last moment is aimed at death: from spiritual teachings to scientific and technical discoveries. Everything – maybe not the last, not the most significant, but a stage on the way to death. There is not a single thing that would block the way, prevent death. Why? This is the world, so far, as we have all been convinced of this and are still being convinced. Spiritual teachings (to varying degrees) detach from the truth, replacing GLOBAL CONCEPTS with vital ones, i.e., those that fit into a person's life. And then? And before that? The idea of VICTORY OVER DEATH is still considered by Christianity today as God-fighting, so it will be rejected priori by many. The vast majority in the world WILL NOT WANT to defeat death. Death by choice is NOT death as a tragic interruption of life from chance, illness, violence. Care, transition, transformation – whatever. How can you allow yourself to think THAT THERE is NO DEATH? This is the most obvious thing in the world and there is nothing to refute it with. That is why it is so difficult to get rid of the "planetary" attitude imposed on us from the moment of the "introduction" of the process of reincarnation through the Control System. You either want to live in a world where there is no death for you, or in a world of dying people. One of these attitudes lives to distract the eye, to translate it from the essence to minor details. Death is deliverance. From what? From suffering. But then why does death bring suffering and pain into the world? Why does a person, family, and people suffer when death "comes"? Or once it was decided that people would have enough of this – the conviction that death would give them deliverance. To live, not just WITHOUT FEAR of death, but also waiting for deliverance. The grandiose fraud with human mortality, which almost all people are convinced of today, can be destroyed, against the background of the ongoing processes of "abolition" and religion, as the basis of this and the state itself, as a system of people management. This means that we will all have a better chance to live to the moment when a solution is found. From this, the need arises to increase the evolutionary rate of collapse to a revolutionary one. This appeal makes us for humanists, about the same as they were for Christians. Or what the bourgeoisie was to the feudal lords. But just as spring always conquers winter, so a new idea whose time has come wins over old ideas whose time has gone. I'm more than sure of that. Consumer civilization is THE LAST STAGE of decomposition of the era of humanism. The so-called "information age" is included in its rights, but NOT AS an epoch, but as a process (tool) intensive destruction of everything that has been imputed to us for the last two thousand years, under the guise of the transition of one era to another. I want to emphasize that THERE were no epochs described in numerous so-called iz(s)toric works, chronicles and "documents". The time frame of the occurrence of each stage of the development of civilization (transition from one civilization to another) was based on the parameters of the executive step-by-step processes from the programs for the "Development of Brain genotypes and Energy Biogenesis of the flesh of the body". The whole story, as a program for the development of brain genotypes, is the Main Law of History, and NOT ANYTHING else. But let's go back to our realities - today EVERYONE is CONNECTED to each other, can create content and have access to the total amount of information. "The possibilities of billions of people connected to each other by mobile devices with unprecedented processors, memory capacities and access to knowledge are limitless."<sup>3</sup> This is rapidly changing the design of society. As a result, the political and economic design will change. Today, dinosaurs — people born in the pre-computer era - are sitting on the key nodes of the old system. Tomorrow they will be crowded by hamsters — people born with a computer in their hands, who do not know how to dial a number on a telephone.

Hamsters compared to dinosaurs are funny from the dinosaurs' point of view. But he who laughs last laughs. When a tropical climate ends, conditions change. In the new climate, dinosaurs don't just become funny to hamsters, they are now their food. The new generation thinks in a different paradigm, they are alien to the old, they strive for the new. While this aspiration HAS NO direction, it is like a diffused light — it illuminates, but it does not represent any force. But if you put it through the PRISM OF AN IDEA, it will turn into a laser. Quantity will turn into quality — the caterpillar will become a butterfly. But let's transfer the picture to our reality. We live in a SOCIETY WITHOUT IDEAS.

<sup>3</sup> Klaus Martin Schwab is a German economist, and since 1971 the founder and permanent president of the World Economic Forum in Davos.

Thinking people have a request for the meaning of life, a need for answers to big questions: "What is the world?", "What follows from this?", "What am I?", "What will happen after death?", "What is the answer to the challenge of death?". But there is no institution in any developed country that gives official answers to ontological questions. All these questions hang in the air. The United States HAS NO official answer to any question. The European Union, China, Japan and other advanced countries also do not have such answers. If anyone thinks that Russia has, he should know that it has ORTHODOX CURTSIES, but not answers. The Church has such answers (I omit their quality, the emphasis is only on availability), but not Russia. Moreover, Russia is

FORBIDDEN TO HAVE such answers. The statement looks strange, but let's remember that ideology is a set of ideas and values, answers to basic questions. Keeping this in mind, we open the Constitution of Russia and see: "No ideology can be established as state or mandatory" (Article 13, paragraph 2). Whatever one may say, a ban on ideology is a BAN on having answers to basic questions. For the sake of objectivity, I will say that the Constitution in Article 2 declares the highest value of rights and freedoms, and repeats the ideology of liberalism. It turns out that the same document in one article prescribes having an ideology, and in another prohibits doing so. The situation with the Constitution shows what a mess the authorities have in their heads. The only ones who have answers to global questions are Third World countries where religion is embedded in the state. But even there EVERYTHING is NOT smooth ... Religious answers have long been and by all accounts do not correspond to the level of development of modern society. If we look not at words, but at deeds, religions in developing countries do not play the role of a guiding star that sets the direction of society, but the role of a TOOL for MANAGING society. A holy place is never empty. Society is like a solution saturated with wandering molecules. The molecules are not organized, but demonstrate search activity. If a grain is dropped into such a solution, crystallization will immediately begin around it. A similar reaction will take place in a society immersed in an ideological vacuum. If a WORLDVIEW IDEA corresponding to the current level of development is omitted there, and answers to global questions will flow from it, crystallization will begin around it. In the conditions of global communication, people WILL BEGIN to BE STRUCTURED around the idea not in a traditional form — not in the state and party, not in a religious and public organization, but in A FUNDAMENTALLY DIFFERENT STRUCTURE, carried out beyond the framework of matter. To visualize the image, imagine: two thousand years ago, the ancient Roman Empire was immersed in an ideological vacuum, like the modern world. Plus, let's imagine that she had a liberal-democratic device, a computer, the Internet and social networks. And in such an empire Christianity arises. It says that there is a world and GIVES ANSWERS to all global questions, a single goal and meaning of life — to overcome death and attain paradise. With global communication, the sermon will not take place in city squares and suburban vacant lots, but on the Internet. The supporters of Christianity that appear will first be scattered all over the Internet. When they reach the first critical size, groups dedicated to the new teaching will begin to arise. People will start producing content and promoting it. This WILL SPEED UP THE PROCESS of the emergence of like-minded people. When the number of supporters reaches the second critical size, they will gather in a thematic ideological social network. This will speed up the process again. One day, the number of supporters will reach the third critical size: the thematic ideological social network will become global. The authoritarian undeveloped ancient Roman Empire had religious answers to all questions. Supporters of Christianity in these conditions took shape in an engineering model known as the Church — a bureaucratic hierarchical institution-ministry. But if the ancient Roman empire had been ideologically democratic and computerized, supporters of the doctrine would have formed into a global ideological social network like Facebook.

SOCIAL NETWORKS are the same non-biological form of life as the State or Religion, Language or Science. Every life strives for its own good. At the first stage, the benefit of every life is one thing — to survive. Newborn social networks were similar to the state. The larger the territory controlled by the state, the more it collects taxes and natural resources from it. The more assets, respectively, the more chances to survive. Similarly, social networks: the more they involve customers, the higher the profit, and the MORE CHANCES to survive. They expand like spots on a map. To imagine the process, imagine the planet as a contour map. Colored dots appear on it. They increase in volume, spreading out in all directions. This continues until they run into each other. Full coverage completes the first stage of the evolution of social networks. At the second stage of evolution, when social networks rested against each other and the boundless expansion ended, social networks became like states that covered the entire planet. If at the first stage the engine of development was the acquisition of NEW TERRITORIES, then at the second stage the engine is the RETENTION of EXISTING territories from the claims of neighbors. At this stage, states are constantly fighting with each other for a place under the sun. Similarly, social networks continuously wage wars with each other for visitors. They also attack each other, trying to drag customers to their site. Just as the war of states for territory stimulated technological progress, those who did not keep up with it were erased from the political map, so the war of social networks for the client also stimulates progress. We all see how the old services are being improved by the industry. At first, all the factories differed from each other in quality. For example, Cadillac showed an advertising trick: three cars were disassembled for spare parts, and all the parts were mixed into one pile. Then parts were taken out of it at random and three cars were assembled again. But Ford COULD NOT do this with their cars. They stayed on the market due to the low price. Time has erased the technical difference. As stated by one reputable magazine in 2016, reviewing the auto market, there are no bad cars. Cars differ in brands, design, equipment, etc., but not in technical quality. Cheap cars DO NOT HAVE some options, not because the company CANNOT make them, but because the manufacturer DOES NOT FIND commercial sense in this. Now there is no question how to make a good car. There is a question of how to sell it. Social networks have done the same thing, only much faster. Yesterday they differed in technical level. What one network could do, the other COULD NOT. There are no such problems today. More precisely, there is, but they are rapidly disappearing under the slogan: "everything for the client." Everyone strives to provide the client with everything so that he DOES NOT need to go from one site to another to search for something or communicate with someone. Search engines acquire functions for communicating or viewing content, and social networks acquire the functions of search engines. Engineering issues related to the creation of such networks have long disappeared. There is no problem to create a technical copy of any global social network. That's no problem at all. The only problem today is NOT TO CREATE a social network, but TO FILL IT with visitors.

At the dawn of the formation of the IT sphere, this task was solved at the expense of original ideas. There is no such hope now. Giants buy or copy any new original idea. The quality of the implementation of the idea of the giants will be incomparably higher than that of its inventor. Global social networks at the peak of development have run into each other and are NO LONGER GROWING. Nowhere. Every social network is under pressure from competitors. Resisting, it increases the internal pressure. The world system is shaking with tension. The pressure is constantly increasing, but the growth of tension cannot stop. It can't last forever. A phase transition is predicted. The only direction of transition is from development in breadth to development upwards, from the plane to the volume. As with the war, when the battle from the plane (in the field) went into volume — under water, into the air, into space. Scientific and technological progress has taken yesterday's way of waging war to a new level — from the plane to the volume. But it can't take social networks to the next level. And commercial motivation CAN'T either. No matter how fantastic a technology and service one company may have, tomorrow they will all appear. Technical development will increase the quality of social networks, which will only increase the tension of the entire system. Yesterday, social networks were a caterpillar. Today they are like a caterpillar pupa in the last stage — they are about to burst from internal tension. In order for the chrysalis to become a butterfly, for the evolution of social networks to reach the next stage, a WORLDVIEW IDEA is needed.

Looking from this perspective at the totality of situations and details, the world is a magnificent gift box, a precious case of ideological vacuum, liberal democracy and scientific and technological progress. It is made under a diamond of incredible value — a WORLDVIEW IDEA. The box is empty and open, waiting for its treasure. Today there are many global commercial social networks, but there is not a single GLOBAL IDEOLOGICAL SOCIAL NETWORK, since there is no ideological idea proportional to the level of development of society. In addition to the previously listed indicators of such an idea (it deduces the main purpose and meaning of life, the concepts of good and evil, and so on), it has another quality that perfectly correlates with the topic of social networks: the potential to hold all of humanity — all 7.5 billion people living on the planet today. Today, no so-called "global idea", no matter whether it is scientific or entertaining, gastronomic or household, will be able to keep billions on itself. The idea of riding a motorcycle or rooting for football, the idea of ecology or women's equality can attract and retain large masses of people. But even in theory it is NOT THOUGHT that they can attract all of humanity. The idea of overcoming death is in fact not ideological, because it is not derived from the scope of the Whole. But it is ideological in scale. So far, nothing can be thought of ABOVE IT. Any other idea on its background is smaller already because to achieve any idea you need to be available. Life is the basis of all goals, meanings and achievements. And since all people are mortal, the IDEA OF OVERCOMING DEATH is able to hold on to the whole of humanity.

Religion is the essence of the social network of the past era. There have been many religions, and humanity has NEVER BEEN UNITED into a single structure. Today the world is immersed in a global ideological vacuum. Therefore, if an IDEA is PLACED into it, a global ideological social network will arise. It will be a new entity that does not exist today — a SUPRANATIONAL FORCE that can be called a Virtual State. It will hang over the planet in the form of a superior force to the same extent that the Vatican once hung-over Catholic states. Against this background, the iz(s) tori of material existence can be represented as a runway on an aircraft carrier. At first it is flat, and at the end it is raised at an angle so that the aircraft can break away from the deck. The story began at the moment of the emergence of the material world. At first it was dead matter that had evolved for about ten billion years — rolling down the runway. Four billion years ago, life arose — speeding up. The moment of the birth of intelligent life — material existence comes to the finish line — ON the RISE at the end of the runway. But for the last 18 thousand years, due to certain circumstances and the "capture" of our planet, while solving completely different tasks through the Earth's control system, modified by the "invaders", it was broken, within the framework of the "development of brain genotypes" into segments: spelean, slave-owning, feudalism, capitalist. The last segment is the consumer society. At its very tip, but already within the framework of the "breaking" of the old Control System and the GLOBAL CHANGES that have begun in this regard, affecting everything — the INFORMATION AGE. And just as an airplane that has reached the end of the runway breaks away from the deck and takes off into the sky, so the world of matter in the new era will move to the next level of being — into the world of NON-MATTER. And the Virtual State will raise it there. This process has already begun. It began in many aspects of our current existence, including with the transformation of the administrative and bureaucratic vertical, built from 2000 to 2012 so carefully and reverently. And about which, on the basis of quite public material, I will remind you in the next article, and for those who have NOT yet "GOT" to the iz(s)toric work "Fundamentals of the Formation of Humanity", it will be an impetus to discover this information. These processes are rapidly gaining momentum and it is within the framework of this information age. They are going on in almost all areas of our current life support. We see and hear all this, and many already understand what is happening. As an example of what is of current concern to everyone - in matters of so-called corruption, which is NOT ONLY disturbing, but has also become a "parable in tongues". Here it is necessary to understand that the "restlessness" of the current leadership, which is "concerned" about the growing corruption, is in vain! Corruption is NOT an OFFICIAL disease of society; it is the program state of the performers of the 42 and 44 brain genotypes. This is their vital, functional performing vocation, ENDOWED with IT from the outside by the old System (born within the framework of the consumer society created by these performers).

Therefore, it is only possible to fight corruption BY ELIMINATING this "vocation", however, together with the performer, and not otherwise! Now this is the task of the new System, it is NOT INSTANTANEOUS in its completion, but in a fairly short time (even in our current understanding) it will be completed. In the period of development of such a process, one should at least try to select individuals of a different brain genotype for such work, and the result will be obvious. But the current leadership does not have a "genotype graph" with which it would be possible to determine such a genotype, and who will allow them to isolate it from the financial environment generated by them (financial fascism, to be more precise). This is a private task. It has a solution that CANNOT be made public today, however, it is already partially implemented. Let me remind readers that it was in this way, regardless of people, that a certain DESTRUCTIVE EFFECT was carried out by an invisible state of parasitism, manifested by its effectiveness in severe material and social infringement, up to a destructive effect, especially on the historically indigenous peoples of Russia. And people need to know this.

Processes are underway... And in the elections held recently (a single voting day on 10 September) – which, according to the results, evoke very CONFLICTING FEELINGS in people, most often critical. For which there are more than enough reasons.

Moreover, in all countries of the world, elections, for today, play a destructive role, splitting the population into two almost equal parts and creating reasons for non-recognition of election results due to obvious and imaginary violations. But no matter how bad the elections are, it is impossible to form a legitimate leadership of the country without them. Therefore, it is necessary to look for such technologies of election campaigns that would consolidate the population around the idea that unites them, and not turn them into groups of people hostile to each other. The main difficulty for using the "new reality" as a UNIFYING IDEA of the election campaign was the problem of its understanding, both by election organizers and voters. And this is despite the fact that the "new reality" is not only on the threshold of our life, but is already present in all spheres of life: there is already a new political reality, a new economic reality, a new social reality, a new educational reality. However, most of the population, and even politicians, DO NOT NOTICE it, and try to live as in the old reality, which is no longer there. To understand the new reality, it was necessary to use this election campaign, because it affects the interests of representatives of ALL GROUPS of people and all, almost illusory parties. All of them have already lost everything they had. They will have to start all over again in a new reality. And by collective efforts to gain new achievements in a new reality. However, it would be VERY WRONG to limit oneself to such a superficial level of judgment. The elections themselves are an element of the so-called democracy, which is being shouted at every corner. Democracy in reality is a fragment of an illusory veil that covered the entire post-Soviet space with rainbow colors of "social and legal equality", according to the Western stencils of their Western consciousness and limited mentality, which NOT ONLY theoretically, but also virtually COULD NOT take root, especially in Russia. Democracy, as an artificially planted program, no longer exists in Russia. The main reason is that the old control software process has been stopped. Maybe in their hearts pseudo-democrats would like to embody something for the "electorate" of all they promised, but who will allow them to do it? The old performers from the Conceptual power<sup>4</sup> are removed from the implementation of program processes, and there will NEVER BE new ones for them. Politics and the election campaign have the most powerful weapon against the frightening appearance of the new reality as a system – its elements are its meaning, its goals and values. They should have BEEN CHOSEN for the main directions of this election campaign. But this was not done, because the New Reality requires understanding, not knowledge, which is not the same thing.

For Russia, the new Goal Vector is objectively prescribed to be the ORGANIZING SAVIOR of Humanity. We must be ready and have such a new structure of authority that will allow us to organize and switch to a NEW STRUCTURE of Human social organization in the shortest possible time and in the most difficult conditions of the changing situation that is happening today before our eyes. Moreover, we will not only have to take PART of the SURVIVING population from other regions of the Planet to our territory (pay attention to those "natural" cataclysms that shake many regions and do not find any intelligible explanations even among the scientific world), but also provide ORGANIZING ASSISTANCE in the places of their traditional residence, where life support conditions and the escorts WILL BE PARTIALLY recreated.

<sup>4</sup> Conceptual power is the power of ideas that have dominated human society for thousands of years and the power of people who are able to generate such ideas. It is autocratic by nature and ignores the "democratic" procedures of society, which do not see and do not want to recognize its autocracy.

In this regard, completely different approaches will be required to form a new state structure of Russia as a whole, to change the basic foundations in the strategies of federalization and regionalization, taking into account their fundamentally changed functions and magnitude. Such basic foundations should only be perceived by the "heart and mind", and not for the benefit of temporary individuals.
